

90 The Renowned History of gain: After which she told the Father and Mother she had heard from their Daughter, who was her Acquaintance, and that she was well, and on her Return to England. This was the agreeable Subject of their Conversation, till after Dinner, when drinking their Healths, she again with Tears saluted them, and falling upon her Knees asked their Blessings.

'Tis impossible to exprefs the mutual Joy

Mrs. MARGERY TWO-SHOES. 91 Joy which this occasioned. Their Conversation was made up of the most endearing Expressions, intermingled with Tears and Caresses.
 Their Torrent of Joy, however, was for a Moment interrupted, by a Chariot which stopped at the Gate, and which brought as they thought a very unseasonable Visitor, and therefore she sent to be excused from seeing Company.

But
